Synopsis

Hunter Wade is done living a lie and ready to be his true self. Unfortunately, his true self is a thirty-six year old man who dresses like he did in high school and has never stepped foot in a nightclub of any sort. Thank goodness for the fabulous, unflappable Mr. Wren. Handsome, confident and refined, Wren takes Hunter under his wing and vows to make him the ultimate player. Things become complicated and confusing as Hunter's makeover proves a little too successful and harmless flirting goes too far. Kisses were the bait Wren used to snare his prey, to melt their resistance and make them his. He perfected kissing but it was just another weapon in his arsenal, it never really did much for him. But he was trapped and melting as Hunter's lips pressed against his and their tongues twisted and searched hungrily. Hunter's head tilted and the kiss became deeper and Wren felt much drunker than he did minutes earlier as Hunter's hand curved around his neck. Wren growled softly against his tongue as he eased Hunter onto his back. His hand slid down his stomach and Wren's cock pulsed insistently against the front of his jeans. His instincts were about to take over when Hunter panted his name. Oh, no, no, no. "Shit," Wren whispered as he sat up and leaned back. "Sorry, I got carried away," he murmured weakly as he reached for his wine and Hunter swore under his breath as he scrubbed his hands over his face. "Yeah. That was." His eyes were dazed as he sat up and Wren swallowed a large gulp of wine then cleared his throat. "I think it's safe to say you don't have anything to worry about," he said and Hunter raised a brow. "No?" he asked and Wren nodded. "That was a very decent kiss. Liar. That was so much more than decent. That was probably the most arousing moment of your life. Wren licked his lips and stifled a moan at the taste of Hunter's lips and tongue. "In fact, if you were anyone else, I don't think I would have stopped," he said and Hunter's lips pulled tight. "I don't know if that's reassuring but thanks," he said sarcastically and Wren gave him a pointed look. "If I didn't care about you as much as I do, I'd have you bent over the arm of this couch and be riding you like a stolen bike," he said. "Ummm." Hunter's brow rose as he stared back and Wren rolled his eyes. "Tomorrow would be hideously awkward and I wouldn't want to jeopardize our friendship," he explained and Hunter frowned. "You don't think it's a little late to worry about awkward?" He asked and Wren shook his head. "Of course not. It was just a kiss," he said and the memory of Hunter's tongue sliding around his made his balls ache. "I only did it so you would stop worrying, it didn't mean anything."

Customer Reviews

Wren and Hunter were absolutely fabulous! I think Wren, which is a name I absolutely love because it takes me back to Footloose (yes, the version with Kevin Bacon because I'm old), was the most interesting book character I have read in awhile. He made me laugh from the very beginning with his over the top personality and cutting wit. He posed as a pompous ass but underneath was a warm and loving man. And Hunter....what can I say. You wanted to hug him, slap him and tuck him in all at the same time (bless his heart). He was so beautifully brave to make such a life changing decision after being with someone for so long. Wren and Hunter were polar opposites but so perfect for each other, they balanced each other out so well. Even now as I am writing this review, I am laughing at the funniest line I think I have ever read in a book: "If I didn't care about you as much as I do, I'd have you bent over the arm of this couch and be riding you like a stolen bike". That needs to be made into a t-shirt. And I loved Mandy too. All the characters in this book were great and this was a fantastic read, as usual from K. Sterling. Her books are extremely well written, have characters you can relate too, delicious humor and steamy sex scenes. If you love the M/M genre, K. Sterling delivers a fun ride! Bravo again K. Sterling - you NEVER disappoint.

Ok, just kidding, sort of...Just when you think all types of romantic tropes have been written, Ms. Sterling manages to add a twist that turns that assumption on it's arse.Meet Wren, a rich, somewhat arrogant man with very little in the way of social skills (a bit like Aiden, but not as clueless). Yet, I fell in love with him. He had never cared for anyone other than himself, but once he met and fell for Hunter, he became a little nicer (mostly to Hunter, who am I kidding?, only to Hunter ^f). The book is funny, erotic and heartwarming. The epilogue is one of my favourite things about the book.Highly recommend, another keeper for me.

Pretty sweet and sexy simple story, but the protagonist was a wee bit wide eyed and the love interest never stopped being a fairly boring dilettante. Usually this author has some interesting character twists or depths that add color to the Road to True Love; not so much with this one.

Another K. Sterling winner. At the age of thirty six Hunter came c out to his fiancée. They parted ways and Hunters neighbour a out and proud gay offered to introduce Hunter to the gay scene. Wren had a crush on Hunter but he doesn't do relationships or so he keeps telling himself. I thoroughly enjoyed Wren and Hunters love story.

I love everything I have read by K. Sterling! This is another book that didn't disappoint. Wren was a doll and loved Hunter. Hunter had to find what he wanted after he came out.K Sterling's books always have me glued to the pages. I'm on the hunt for my next one now.
